What stops a shopper from buying this charger

Milwaukee M12/M18 Multi-Voltage DC Vehicle Battery Charger

Model 48-59-1810 · $227.58 · dkhardware.com

The shopper: a contractor with Milwaukee tools who wants to charge batteries from the truck. I went through the live page on mobile (iPhone 17, 402pt) and desktop (1440px) with four questions in mind:

- Will it fit my batteries and my truck?
- What will it cost me, delivered?
- When will it arrive?
- Can I trust this page?

Impact = how badly it blocks the purchase × how many shoppers hit it. Screenshots: live page, October 2026. Annotations in red; every fix is shown in green on the redesign.

HIGH IMPACT · Mobile + Desktop

The product is buried under store chrome

BEFORE · FIRST MOBILE SCREEN

WHAT'S WRONG

1. Four header icons, including an eye and a phone with no labels
2. A full-width search bar with "AI Mode" on a page the shopper has already found
3. A scrolling promo ticker about custom orders
4. A sticky tab bar for four sections below the fold
5. "Boat Tools" plus a red "Check Similar Products" button
6. A floating call button over the price
7. A sticky Custom Quote / Net Terms / Chat bar that covers the photo

The photo only starts 750pt down, half hidden. The first screen shows the store, not the charger.

WHY IT MATTERS

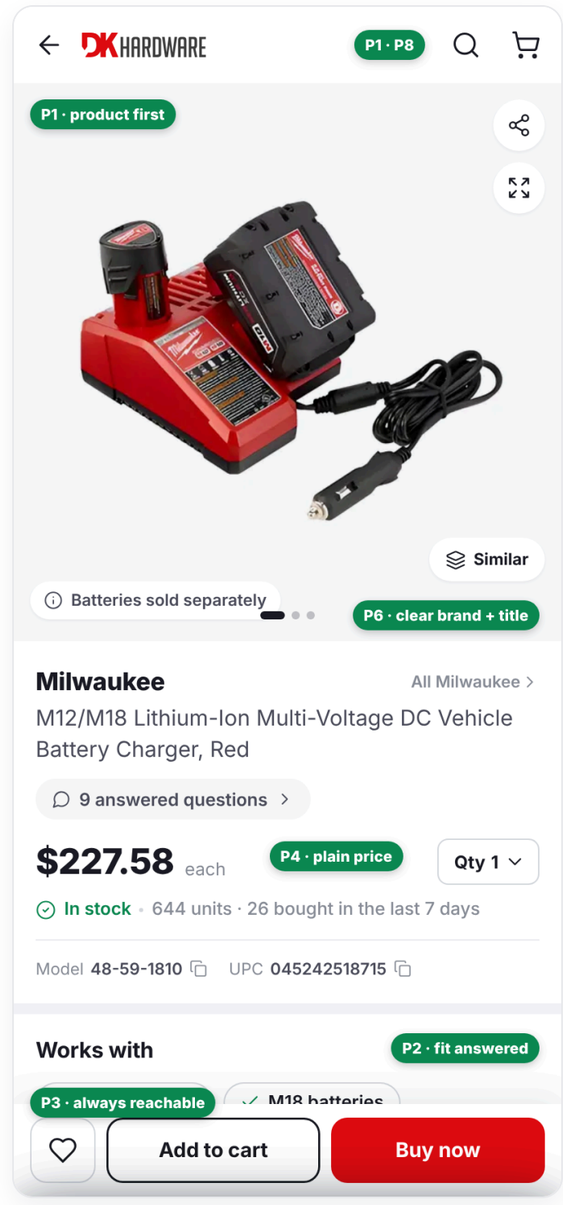

Shoppers decide in seconds and look for the photo first. When the first screen is navigation, the page feels like a B2B portal and people bounce before they reach the price.

HOW I'D FIX IT

Image first. A 56px header (back, logo, search, cart), the photo edge to edge right under it, then brand, title and price. The promo moves into the offers list, the B2B bar and tabs leave the first screen, and the buy actions sit in one bottom bar.

DESKTOP 6 utility links, 6 header items, an 8-item menu and 3 promo banners sit above the title. The fix keeps one nav row and moves the B2B links into one quiet "For business" group.

"Will it fit my batteries?" has no clear answer

BEFORE · ROWS FROM THE SPEC TABLE

① 12/24V in, 18V out... or "12/18"?

Input Voltage	12/24 V
Output Voltage	18 V
1 Voltage	12/18

② 30–60 minutes or 3 hours?

2 Charging Time	30 to 60 Min.
Time to Charge (Hours)	3

③ For M18... but series M12?

3 For Use With	M18
Series	M12

④ Batteries in the photo: are they included?

WHAT'S WRONG

For a charger, the only question that matters is "does it fit my battery and my truck?". The answer is spread over a 33-row table that contradicts itself five times:

1. Input 12/24V and output 18V, then "Voltage 12/18"
2. Charging time "30 to 60 min", then "Time to charge: 3 hours"
3. "For use with M18" and "Series M12", while the title says M12/M18 and the first feature names one 18V pack
4. All four gallery images are the same photo, with two batteries. Nothing says whether they're in the box

Also: cord length is listed as 6.3 ft and 6 ft, and dimensions appear twice with different numbers and no units.

WHY IT MATTERS

A shopper who isn't sure it fits won't buy, or buys and returns it. Each contradiction also makes every other claim on the page harder to believe.

Works with — P2 · fit answered

- ✓ M12 batteries
- ✓ M18 batteries
- ✓ 12V DC outlet
- ✓ 24V DC outlet
- ✓ Auto shut-off

ⓘ Charger only. Batteries are sold separately. Vehicle use only: it won't run from a wall outlet or a transformer.

Highlights — P2 · P7 · one clean spec set

12/24V DC Input	M12 & M18 Batteries	30–60 min Charge time
6.3 ft Cord	1 battery At a time	5 years Warranty

Keep your M12 and M18 batteries topped up between jobs. Plug into your truck's 12V or 24V DC outlet; protective electronics shut the charger down before it can drain the vehicle battery.

Add to cart competes with 14 other actions

BEFORE · THE BUY BOX ON MOBILE

WHAT'S WRONG

1. The only buy button, about 1,140pt down the page
2. Affirm and PayPal links squeezed next to it
3. "+ Add to Wishlist" as an underlined text link
4. "Buy in Bulk & Save - See How" and "Watch Now"
5. Get Volume Pricing in a red outline, louder than Add to cart
6. Get Custom Quote
7. B2B Net Terms, Safe Payment, Ask Question
8. A cancer warning right under the buy box

Add the sticky Custom Quote / Net Terms / Chat bar and the floating call button: 14 other tappable things. After you scroll past the button there's no way back to it. The sticky bar sells B2B services instead.

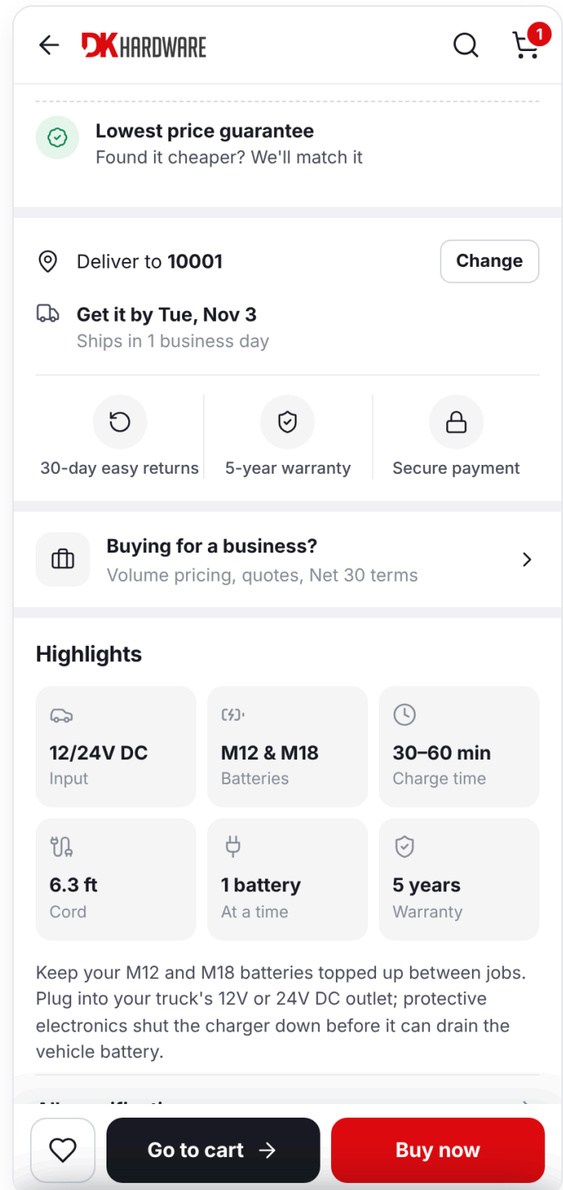

WHY IT MATTERS

Every extra option slows the decision (Hick's law). Everyday buyers see tools they don't need and wonder whether they need an account or a quote to buy one charger.

HOW I'D FIX IT

One pair of actions, always on screen: a bottom bar with wishlist, Add to cart and Buy now. After adding it turns into "Go to cart". All B2B tools sit behind one "Buying for a business?" row. Pay-later moves to Offers.

AFTER · MID-SCROLL, ITEM ALREADY ADDED

Price and delivery raise questions instead of answering them

BEFORE · PRICE AND SHIPPING

WHAT'S WRONG

1. "SAVE UP TO 22.76": no $, no original price, no condition. It reads like a discount on this unit
2. ...but it's actually a bulk saving, hidden behind "Buying In Bulk"
3. "QUICK SHIPPING*": the asterisk leads nowhere
4. Pay-later offers crammed beside the buy button, one cut off mid-word

Nowhere on the page is there a shipping cost, a delivery date or a ZIP check.

WHY IT MATTERS

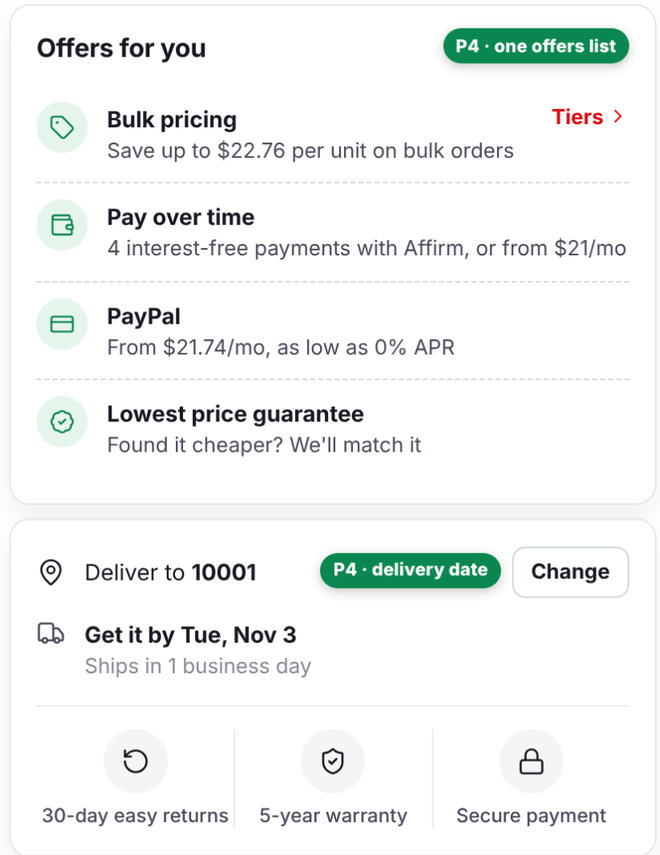

Unexpected costs are the top reason shoppers abandon a purchase in Baymard Institute's checkout research. For a $227 charger, "what will it cost me, and when do I get it" decides whether it goes in the cart at all.

HOW I'D FIX IT

A plain price with stock on one line. One "Offers for you" list: bulk pricing (labelled as bulk), Affirm, PayPal and the price-match guarantee. A delivery block with ZIP, "Get it by Tue, Nov 3" and "Ships in 1 business day", plus returns and warranty.

DESKTOP The same price block and offers become three compact chips under the price, with the delivery date above the buttons.

The reviews are about the store, not this charger

BEFORE · TOP OF PAGE, THEN THE REVIEWS

WHAT'S WRONG

1. Five stars and "See reviews" right under the title
2. "4.8 Overall Rating" with no review count
3. Each review shows a single star and talks about delivery
4. Others cover back orders, refunds, order tracking, a shower repair and an RV cabinet hinge

These are Shopper Approved reviews of the store. Not one is about this charger. "Related Videos" is a generic DK Hardware brand video, too.

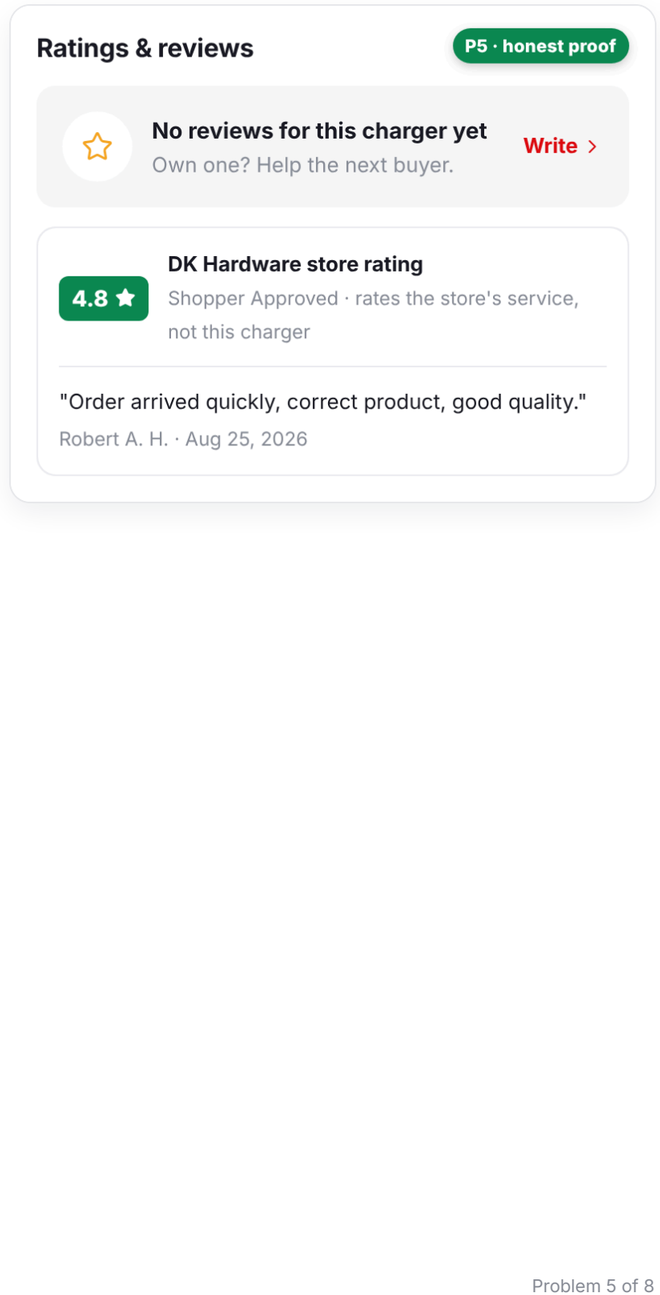

WHY IT MATTERS

Reviews are how shoppers check fit and quality. Stars that turn out to describe something else feel like a trick, and a shopper who spots it starts doubting the rest of the page.

HOW I'D FIX IT

Split proof by what it's about. For the product, "No reviews for this charger yet · Write one". For the store, a labelled "DK Hardware store rating 4.8 · rates the store's service, not this charger". Real signals move up: 9 answered questions linked from the title, 30-day returns, 5-year warranty.

AFTER · HONEST PROOF

Wrong category and mixed brand signals

BEFORE · BREADCRUMB, TITLE, OVERVIEW

WHAT'S WRONG

1. The breadcrumb files a power-tool charger under Marine & Boats › Boat Tools
2. The title starts with the SKU as a link and is split by a "Click To Copy" label
3. "Item # by CR Laurence" names a second company next to Milwaukee
4. The overview calls it a "CRL Milwaukee Charger"

The URL also promises "RedLink Intelligence", which the page never mentions.

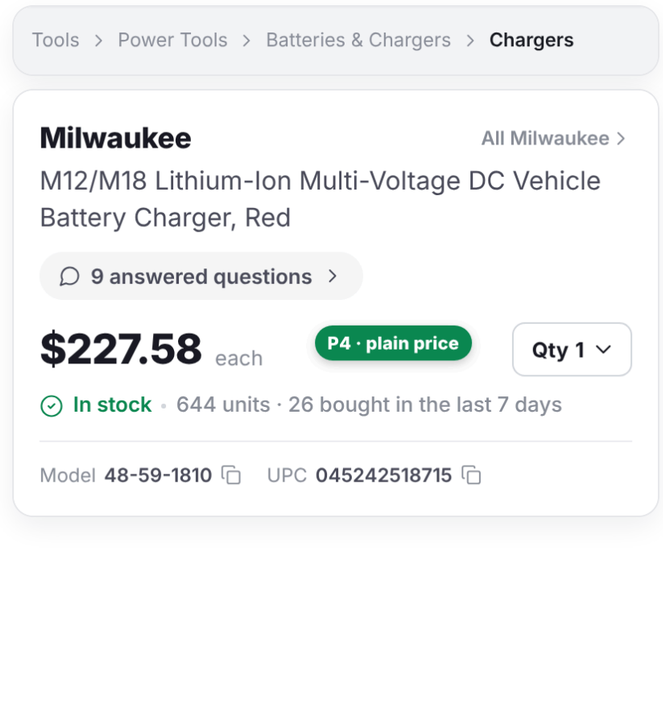

WHY IT MATTERS

Shoppers check the breadcrumb and brand to confirm they're in the right place and buying genuine Milwaukee. A boat category and a second brand name raise doubt about authenticity. The wrong category also hides the charger from anyone browsing chargers.

HOW I'D FIX IT

Breadcrumb Tools › Power Tools › Batteries & Chargers › Chargers. Brand first and bold, linking to all Milwaukee, then a clean title with no SKU. Model and UPC move to a small row with copy icons. The distributor stays in the full spec table.

Noise and inconsistency that wear down trust

BEFORE

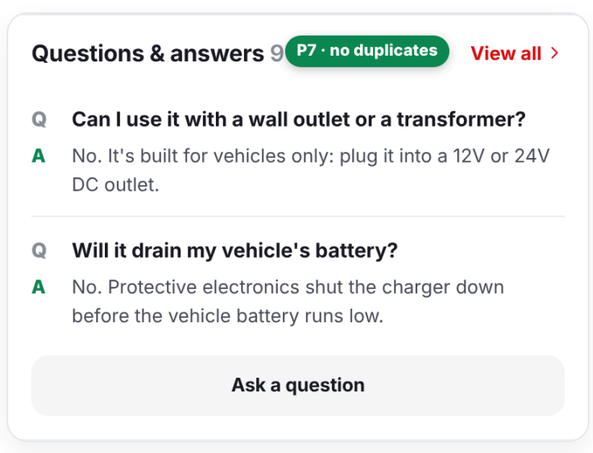

07 Duplicate Q&A and internal data

1. "18 Questions" are really 9: every question appears twice, all collapsed, no answers visible
2. Internal fields like Part Status "A", Division "2032", Vendor Drop Ship "N" and Nomenclature, plus words broken mid-cell ("Preve nt", "Hour s")

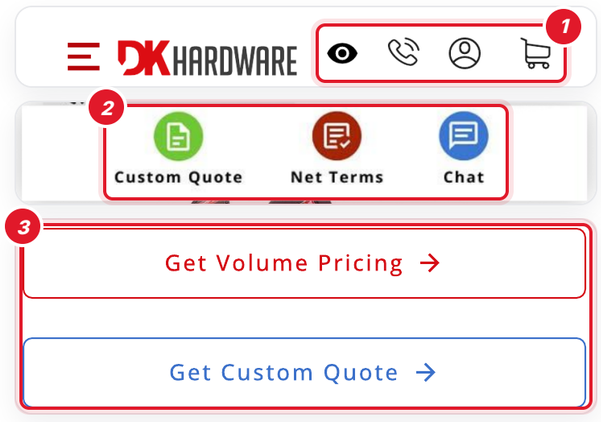

HOW I'D FIX IT

Each question shown once, with the answer visible and "View all 9". Specs grouped into Compatibility, Power, Size and General, with internal fields removed. The two warnings sit in one "Safety & warnings" row.

AFTER

08 Icons and buttons don't share one system

1. Header mixes a filled eye, a hand-drawn phone, a circled user and a line cart
2. Green, red and blue filled circles in the sticky bar
3. Red outline, blue outline, filled blue and boxed buttons, each with different letter-spacing

HOW I'D FIX IT

One icon family (Lucide, 1.75px stroke) everywhere. Three button styles: red filled for the strongest action, dark outline for Add to cart, soft grey for the rest. One accent colour, DK red.
